About the Journal

Singularities is an international, peer-reviewed, transdisciplinary research journal published biannually since 2014. Conceived as an independent academic initiative based in Kerala, India, the journal is dedicated to re-examining the role of scholarship within today's dynamic cultural and intellectual environment.

Over the years, Singularities has established itself as a trusted platform for rigorous, boundary-crossing research that addresses both urgent and enduring questions in the humanities and social sciences. Each issue brings together work from diverse fields, encouraging contributors to move beyond disciplinary silos and engage with the deeper structures and tensions shaping our contemporary world.

The journal's past collaborations with leading institutions have led to a series of international conferences on compelling themes such as Power, Beauty, Truth, Time, Liberty, Love, Race, and Evil. Through these dialogues, Singularities continues to foster a vibrant space for independent and affiliated scholars committed to intellectual depth and contextual sensitivity.

With a blind peer-review process and an impact factor of 6.875, Singularities remains committed to publishing original, conceptually rigorous, and contextually grounded work that challenges inherited categories and contributes to meaningful academic discourse.

Call for Submissions

Singularities invites original and unpublished research papers that reflect theoretical clarity, relevance, and critical engagement. Articles should demonstrate serious academic inquiry and contribute substantively to ongoing debates in the humanities and social sciences.
